Alcohol and Drug Information Service- 1800 422 599

In addition to the below information, further information regarding drug and alcohol treatment options available in NSW can be found by calling the Alcohol and Drug Information Service on 1800 422 599. This service provides 24/7 information, support and referrals for those affected by alcohol and other drug use. ADIS Web Chat is also available from Monday to Friday 8.30am – 5pm (including public holidays).

A note regarding the information contained in this list:

This rehab list was last updated in April 2021. Since that time there may have been changes to services. If you come across any information in this document that is now out of date or incorrect, or you find out about a new service that is not in this document, please email ruth.carty@legalaid.nsw.gov.au so that the list can be updated.

DEFINITIONS AND ACRONYMS:

D&A: acronym- stands for 'drugs and alcohol'.

Detox/Withdrawal management: Withdrawal management is the short-term medical and psychological care of a person experiencing withdrawal symptoms as a result of stopping or reducing use of their drug of dependence. Withdrawal management may also be known as detoxification or detox, and is provided in outpatient, inpatient and residential settings.

Dual diagnosis: The term dual diagnosis refers to one or more diagnosed mental health problems occurring at the same time as problematic drug and alcohol use. A dual diagnosis condition can include: a mental health problem or disorder leading to or associated with problematic alcohol and/or other drug use.

Abstinence based approach: An abstinence-based approach means that clients must completely abstain from drugs and alcohol while in the rehabilitation facility. Usually abstinence based programs will not accept people on the methadone/suboxone program and may not accept people on other prescribed medications.
